

Dr. Menassa's research efforts are focussed on the optimization of recombinant protein expression in crops, field testing of transgenic plant material and the development of crop platforms for recombinant protein production. The molecular farming projects are focussed on the production of immune-modulators for treatment of human disease, oral vaccines for infectious diseases of swine, and spider silk production.