

Dr. Kan Wang is the Director of Plant Transformation Facility at Iowa State University and Associate Professor in the Department of Agronomy. Her primary research interests are the development of advanced technology for genetic transformation of corn and soybean, as well as the utilization of plant biotechnology for crop improvement and for production of vaccine in transgenic plants.